Newsline 2008

This year has been an interesting year for aviation in South Africa, from the flight of the newest aircraft to the visit of the world's biggest aircraft. It has all been well worth it and there are a lot of lessons to be learnt regarding safety and air traffic data. In January we had the Airbus A380 visit Johannesburg for the first time, there were thousands of spectators all over the airport waiting to get a glimpse of the biggest. Managing director John Trossen of Airbus was very pleased with FAN services and the way. There was a very good thing for ANSA because their ground staff had a good training session with regards to managing big aircraft on the ground. We also had the first occasion of a local to Virginian aviator M. Trevor Erasmus, in his latest ZU-SZC. The accident happened just outside of Krugersdorp after he spotted smoke in the cockpit. Investigation are still underway by the inspectors at CAA.
